Grafton County Conservation District (GCCD) welcomes guests to our 2018 Annual Meeting. Each year, GCCD presents our Agriculture Steward of the Year and Forest Steward of the Year awards to deserving landowners and/or forest professionals that demonstrate land and resource stewardship through use of best management practices, and outreach to the community.

GCCD is pleased to announce the Agriculture Steward of the Year 2017 is Jim Kennedy. Jim is a Certified Wetland Scientist and Landscape Architect. He assisted GCCD with streambank erosion inventories, and has been a District Cooperator in every sense. On his home farm, he has established warm season grasses and pollinator plots, and hosted many field walks and workshops. Jim serves on the Hanover Conservation Commission and teaches workshops throughout the Upper Valley.

Bruce Streeter has been satisfying woodlot owners with both his skidder and horse-logging equipment for over 25 years. Bruce works alone on smaller jobs, and with Tracy Burns on larger operations, always with care for the residual woodlot, and safety. Besides logging with his horses he also gives sleigh rides at area events and fairs. He is a favorite at the Rocks Estate whenever the need arises. Bruce Streeter has been named GCCD's Forest Steward of the Year 2017.

Rebecca Rule gathers and tells stories in New England, mostly New Hampshire. She is the author of twelve books, and has taught fiction writing and composition for several years at the University of New Hampshire. Crosscut, is an oral history of the mills and logging and life in the north country delivered with good stories and good humor.
